

Can work be a motivation in itself?
What should be the parameters for choosing my career?
Money? Fame?
Who decides for me – the trend, marks, parents or myself?
What are the options for my future?
Have I ever really explored my Self?

The Gap Year College program is a co-educational and residential programme for young adults. It is a place to explore and understand your aim in life before making important decisions; a place to learn for the joy of knowing, not because of external pressures (i.e. marks, parents, peer pressure, etc.). It is a place where you learn how to think, not what to think.

The programme is based on a rational understanding of life, and includes courses on philosophy, ontology, lateral thinking, cultural studies, literature, language, music, and the arts. The methods of learning include classroom sessions, dialogues, readings and films, hands-on training, seminars with prominent personalities, fieldwork, interactions, apprenticeship of your choice, and personal exploration.

WHEN: From July 2007 to April 2008
WHERE: In the majestic foothills of the Himalayas at the SIDH campus in Kemty village, (approximately 15 km from Mussoorie)
FOR WHOM: Students who have passed Class X or XII; or young students (preferable between 16-21 years) who are interested in self-exploration.
